FRANCE NICE COUNTRY BUT DOES NOT COMPARE WITH "GOOD OLD U.S.A."

Melville Templeman in a recent letter from France said:
I am feeling fine and seeing a great deal of France. It is sure worth while looking at.

The people are fine. I can't talk to them very much but am beginning to speak French a little. A man can get anything here that he can in the U. S. though it costs quite a bit.

We do not see any autos excepting those owned by the government owing to the shortage of gasoline. Taxes are pretty high. Instead of four wheeled wagons as we see in the United States, most everyone has a cart. People are charged by the number of wheels and the size of the tires so you can see why they use carts.

Trains have small engines which look like our switch engines and the cars look like our cars. The U. S. has real big box cars and real engines to pull them. It sure looks good to see them roll by. It is sure a fine country but it can not be compared with our old U. S. A. in any way.

WAITING ORDERS

George F. Williston at last report was still at Fort McArthur. He had passed his entrance examination to Fortress Monroe with a grade of 100 per cent and was not sure as to what the government's intentions were about discharging the men or going ahead with their training.

MINING NEWS FROM YAVAPAI COUNTY

PRESCOTT, Ariz., Dec. 7.—Yavapai county kept up her patriotic pace in the production of copper all through the war period and now that the great conflict is over there will be no abatement of production until the demand shows signs of falling off. There is little likelihood, however, of such a contingency arising for several years to come, as devastated Europe during the period of reconstruction will need immense quantities of the red metal. In addition the home demand with a period of expansion facing the country, will probably increase instead of decrease. While the present and future assure prosperity to the producers there is already a revival of interest in the so-called prospects, or mines in the development stage. During the war period interest seemed to lag and capital was shy of putting its money into these prospects, no matter how flattering appeared the outlook for them. The situation now is different. Money, generally speaking, is seeking investment, and already signs are manifest of a mining revival in this county with the coming spring. Already options have been taken on a number of properties in the Mayer district and active development work will be prosecuted when the winter months have passed. The Hillside district is also claiming attention of engineers and several deals of magnitude are on the tapis. The district, possessing mineral possibilities equal to any in the county which is famous for its mines, has thus far been neglected, chiefly due to transportation handicaps. Now that the county has completed a road into the district over which ore can be hauled in motor trucks, it is coming into its own and soon will take its place with Verde, Mayer and other centers. Men whose faith in the Hillside country has been of that character which "moves mountains" are on the verge of having their dreams come true, and their long, patient waiting, will soon be rewarded.

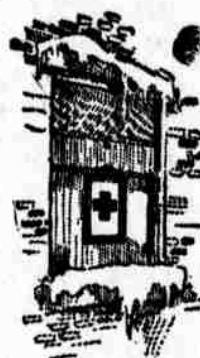

Arizona is essentially a mining state and although the industry is yet in swaddling clothes, it is the backbone of its wealth and prosperity. And that it is prosperous no one can deny. Wages undreamed of a few years ago, are being paid all classes of miners, from the mucker to the most skilled employee, and they are enjoying the luxuries and comforts of life on a par with the mine managers. Take away the mines, and it has been said with a great degree of truth that the state could be tattered to its original owners, the Indians, and they would scorn the proffered gift. Without the mines it is a certainty that taxes would be practically prohibitive and educational facilities, good roads and many of the other benefits of the people of the state now enjoy would be denied them. A recent report of the State Board of Equalization shows that the mines pay four-fifths of the taxes and that the seven so-called mining counties represent $654,957,350.35 of the total assessable wealth of $834,030,532.22. Next to Cochise county in the list is Gila with $165,647,782.48 and then comes Yavapai with $130,375,381.62 assessed valuation. The mining counties will pay into the State treasury on the tax rate of 39 cents on the $100, which has been fixed for the year, in round numbers about $2,700,000 a tidy little sum when it is considered that the total amount to be raised by taxation will be $3,400,000.

MRS. W. C. GREENE WEDS IN ANGEL CITY

Mrs. W. C. Greene, widow of the late W. C. Greene of the Cananea mines, was wedded to her major domo, Charles Wilwall, in Los Angeles, a few days ago. Mrs. Greene was at one time a compositor on one of the Tucson papers and is an excellent woman. She was left a big ranch and considerable money by her late husband.
